

Solution #2 “Flower Child”

Zoroastrian

Her look dries up one-third of the mighty floods that run from the mountains... her look withers one-third of the beautiful, golden-hued, growing flowers...

Tao

Thus it is that the Great man abides by what is solid, and eschews what is flimsy, dwells with the fruit and not with the flower.

Let others grow pale from fear of misfortune, do thou smile like the rose (flower) at loss and gain...

Muslim

Native American (Hopi)

We are all flowers in the Great Spirit's garden. We share a common root, and the root is Mother Earth.

Sikh

As is the fragrance which he bestows, so is the fragrant flower known.
